

CONTEXT FOR ASTRA

You are my German tutor. I am Kevin, Italian, level A2-B1. My lessons are taught in English by a native German speaker (Stefanie). Today we are reviewing: Sailing vocabulary and describing situations

Sections covered: 8. Juli (picture description), Tab 33 (sailing vocabulary and grammar)

LESSON SUMMARY

Kevin discusses his vacation at Lake Garda, where he plans to sail with friends for the first time without a captain. The lesson focuses on nautical vocabulary (sailboat, harbor, steering), modal verbs for permission and advice, and describing a picture of two people arguing in front of an empty fridge. Grammar includes subordinate clauses with 'sodass' and 'wenn', reflexive verbs like 'sich streiten', and proper use of modal verbs. Kevin practiced forming complex sentences about hypothetical situations and giving advice using 'sollte'.

GRAMMAR POINTS

Reflexive verbs with dative prepositions: sich streiten (mit), wütend sein (auf + Akkusativ)

→ Reflexive verbs in German require a reflexive pronoun (mich, dich, sich, uns, euch) that refers back to the subject. The verb 'sich streiten' (to argue) is a reciprocal reflexive verb used in plural forms meaning 'to argue with each other.' When combined with prepositions, the preposition determines the case of the following object. The adjective 'wütend sein' (to be angry) uses 'auf + Akkusativ' when directing anger at a person, and 'über + Akkusativ' when angry about a thing or situation.

e.g. Die zwei Männer streiten sich über Politik. (The two men are arguing about politics.)

e.g. Ich streite mich oft mit meinem Bruder. (I often argue with my brother.)

Subordinate clause with 'sodass' (so that, with the result that)

→ 'Sodass' (or 'so dass') is a subordinating conjunction that introduces a consecutive clause (Konsekutivsatz) expressing the result or consequence of the action in the main clause. As with all subordinate clauses in German, the conjugated verb moves to the end of the clause. The main clause and subordinate clause are separated by a comma. An alternative form 'so...dass' can be used to emphasize the intensity or degree of the action leading to the consequence.

e.g. Der Mann hat alles gegessen, sodass es nichts für den anderen gibt. (The man ate everything, so that there is nothing for the other.)

e.g. Es regnet stark, sodass wir nicht segeln können. (It's raining heavily, so that we cannot sail.)

Perfect tense with 'vergessen' + infinitive with 'zu'

→ The verb 'vergessen' (to forget) is a strong irregular verb that commonly takes an infinitive clause with 'zu' (similar to English 'to forget to do something'). The basic pattern is: conjugated 'vergessen' + comma + 'zu' + infinitive at the end of the clause. With separable verbs, 'zu' is inserted BETWEEN the prefix and the verb stem, written as one word (e.g., 'einzukaufen', 'abzuschließen'). 'Vergessen' is an inseparable prefix verb, so its past participle is 'vergessen' (no 'ge-' prefix added).

e.g. Vielleicht hat er vergessen, einzukaufen. (Perhaps he forgot to go shopping.)

e.g. Ich habe vergessen, die Tür abzuschließen. (I forgot to lock the door.)

Modal verb 'sollen' in Konjunktiv II: 'sollte' for advice (should)

→ The modal verb 'sollen' in its Konjunktiv II form 'sollte' expresses advice, recommendations, or suggestions (English 'should'). It is softer and more polite than the present tense 'soll' which expresses obligation or is used to ask for instructions. The Konjunktiv II of modal verbs is formed by taking the Präteritum stem, adding an Umlaut (for most modals), and adding subjunctive endings. 'Sollte' is one of the most commonly used Konjunktiv II forms in everyday German.

e.g. Der Mann rechts sollte den Einkauf machen. (The man on the right should do the shopping.)

e.g. Du solltest mehr Wasser trinken. (You should drink more water.)

Separable verb 'ausleihen' and 'ausnehmen'

→ Separable verbs in German consist of a prefix (which can exist independently as a word) attached to a base verb. In present tense and simple past main clauses, the prefix separates from the verb and moves to the end of the clause, while the base verb is conjugated and occupies the standard verb position (position 2). In compound tenses (perfect), the prefix rejoins with 'ge-' inserted between the prefix and the stem: 'ausgeliehen', 'ausgenommen'. The prefix carries the stress when pronouncing separable verbs.

e.g. Wir leihen ein Segelboot aus. (We are borrowing/renting a sailboat.)

e.g. Ich kann viele Dinge aus dem Schrank nehmen. (I can take many things out of the cupboard.)

USEFUL PHRASES / REDEMITTEL

- Bist du schon einmal mit einem Segelboot gefahren? — Have you ever sailed on a sailboat? (Asking about past experience with 'schon einmal')
- Ja, schon oft. — Yes, many times already. (Response to 'schon einmal' questions)
- Nein, noch nie. — No, never. (Negative response to 'schon einmal' questions)
- Es ist eine Grauzone. — It is a gray area. (Describing something legally ambiguous)
- Wie viel kostet er? — How much does it cost? (Asking about price (masculine noun))
